A SUMMARY OF ACTIVIST RESEARCH - This is where we're currently at. Thoughts?

TOO DAMN BRIGHT

A summary of research posted to reddit.com/r/fuckyourheadlights by activist u/hell\_yes\_or\_BS

Part 1: The Hypothesis

"Those blindingly bright headlights can't be legal... right?"

The trend toward blindingly bright headlights on new vehicles has resulted in dangerous driving conditions worldwide.

An anonymous American engineer sought to quantify the pain he was experiencing on the road.

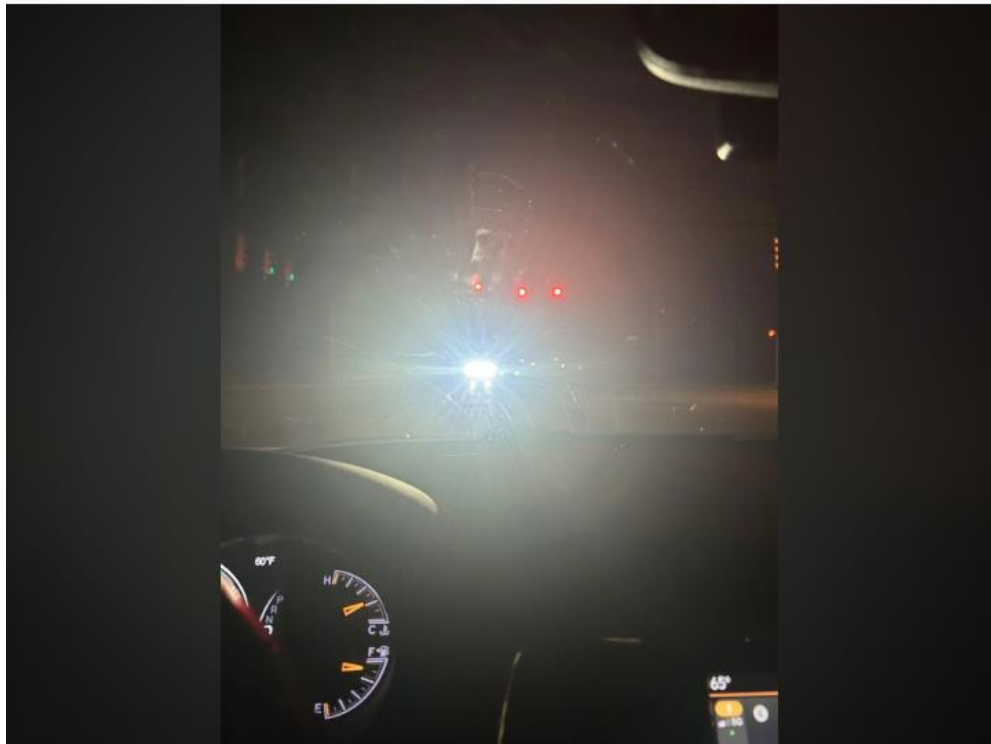

He started by researching the regulations. He began measuring headlight brightness with a self-constructed test fixture.

Convincing members of the public to have their vehicle's headlights tested in a stranger's garage proved to be difficult, but a remedy was found: dealerships.

Dr. Chanda Prescod-Weinstein breaks down why LED headlights are, in fact, too bright

RANT

Chanda Prescod-Weinstein @IBJIYONGI · Nov 26, 2022
LED headlights are a menace, and I can't believe their brightness levels aren't regulated

Chanda Prescod-Weinstein @IBJIYONGI · Nov 26, 2022
Also I can't believe no one talks about this. They're awful.

Chanda Prescod-Weinstein @IBJIYONGI · Nov 27, 2022
Also fun, as the person who teaches radiative processes as a professor, to have men "explaining" that my issue is with the color and angling not the brightness, as if that doesn't mean that the lights are too bright in the bandwidth and solid angle they shine in

Chanda Prescod-Weinstein @IBJIYONGI · Nov 27, 2022
Related: if you look at textbooks that cover radiative processes, "bright" is not consistently defined which is why my students all learn to use and calculate with "luminosity," "intensity," and "absolute magnitude" and "apparent magnitude"

Chanda Prescod-Weinstein @IBJIYONGI · Nov 27, 2022
But, pedants, every day folk know what "too bright" is, physically. Intuitively.
So these LED lights are too fucking bright and whatever regulations are in place are failing. Stop talking down to people.

Chanda Prescod-Weinstein @IBJIYONGI · Nov 27, 2022
Mostly unrelated: I got a new math textbook specifically because it discusses solid angles. I was so excited. This topic is poorly covered, but everyone expects students to understand it when they see it! 🤔🤔

Is anybody else having issues with oncoming cars flashing their lights at you at night? I'm getting flashed about 75% of the time. I've started flashing back because I don't want them to think I'm just not paying attention. The auto-dim function is working great, but the lights are just so bright. I'm thinking they should give us a mod where we can reduce the brightness of the big running light bar... maybe that's what makes it "feel like" the lights are so bright for oncoming traffic? Maybe if that was much dimmer, it wouldn't look so blinding. Just thinking out loud. Love the lights though.

Truck's super bright lights

0:17 / 1:09

The video shows a first-person perspective from a vehicle's dashboard. In the center, a truck is reversing, and its reverse lights are so bright that they create a large, white, circular glare that obscures the truck's rear. The scene is set on a road with trees and a cloudy sky.

The image is a meme featuring a white pickup truck driving on a flat, sandy desert plain. In the background, there are large, blue-tinted mountains. A herd of animals is visible in the distance, and several flying creatures, similar to the Gollum-like creatures from The Lord of the Rings, are flying in the sky. The overall scene is reminiscent of the Ringworld environment.

Tesla drivers, are your headlights bright enough?

u/SlippyCliff76 • 1 mo. ago

Automakers have gotten so bad at managing headlight glare that lights like THIS are now common.
