I am blinded by these lights. I think the light trucks are the biggest offenders as their drivers seem to be more aggressive, such that when they are tailgating me, I am blinded in my rearview mirror, despite the self dimming feature!

the new bright LED lights cause intense pain behi my eyes and to my brain, as well as an after image resulting in distraction and temporary blind spots for myself. I know avoid driving at night time as much as possible for this reason. Even during the day time, some lights are still too bright to also cause this as well. I request that this issue be heard and looked into by the now thousands affected by this and hopefully addressed! Thank you for taking time into looking into this matter!

Even as a pedestrian those lights are annoying and dangerous. If one is walking outside on dark winter evenings, sudden bright lights in one's eyes obscure everything else and make a pedestrian more likely to trip or slip and fall or walk into obstacles or get hit by drivers or bike riders who are also blinded by the lights.

These headlights make my windshield become something that obstructs my view of the road almost entirely. The only thing that remains visible as the offending vehicle passes is those glaring headlights. If someone cut infringement of me in a car, a bicyclist, a pedestrian.. I would have zero warning until those lights pass me not allowing much reaction time depending on distance.

I drive 2-lane rural roads at night and cars with blinding lights have me navigating the road (at 50-60 mph) by focusing on the edge of the pavement where it meets the shoulder__if there was anything in the lane in front of me, I'd run right into it!

These overly bright lights are a definite hazard, particularly to anyone in sedan-like vehicle, and not a jacked up truck with headlights that are 4- feet above the ground.

Thank you NHTSA, for dropping the ball and not doing your job!

The auto makers don't really realize that those LED lights even on the trucks that leave them on the high beams. That could give migraine headaches, it also has us trying to avoid them, but we can run off the road. The pick up truck owners don't care what they're doing to oncoming traffic or they following behind somebody. I have to adjust my mirrors because of the lights are so bright. I want to continue driving at night time, but not at the expense of the LED lights that are doing to me and other drivers
